

Sunny, with highs in the 80s

BEVERLY PRESS

INSIDE

• Beverly Hills
affordable housing changes pg. 3
• BHPD captain retires pg. 4

Volume 29 No. 37 Serving the Beverly Hills, West Hollywood, Hancock Park and Wilshire Communities September 12, 2019

'Moon Turns Green' at Lowell Ryan Project

Lowell Ryan Projects is presenting the solo exhibition of Los Angeles-based artist Erin Trefry called "If the Moon Turns Green" to Oct. 12. The show features a series of new works, including paintings, assemblage and sculptures, that are composed of various materials, such as paint, ceramics and sartorial objects like clothing, shoes and handbags.

The works use materials from Trefry's family: her father's sweatshirt, her mother's purse handles, her grandmother's shoes and drawer pulls from the family's home. Meant to make guests think about the human form, the work references the body's interior and exterior with skin and bone concealed and strategically revealed.

Lowell Ryan Projects is located at 4851 W. Adams Blvd. For information, visit lowellryanprojects.com, or call (323)998-0063.

photo courtesy of Lowell Ryan Projects

Erin Trefry's "Impermanent time that weeps (2018)" is part of her solo exhibition.